McNeal draws legends to campus

By Ashley Lamar

Everyone knew the man approaching the podium and were awaiting his comments on Kareem McNeal, the man of the evening. He stands up, looks at McNeal and says, "You can't say I am more important than you, no one has a scholarship in my name." Those were the first words of the Crimson Tide's last championship coach, Gene Stallings.

On Saturday, June 9, Shelton State hosted Celebrate a Triumph of the Spirit in honor of Kareem McNeal, the strength coach of three years here at Shelton State. McNeal, played football at the University of Alabama from 1991-95.

Going into his senior year, McNeal was in a car accident, causing him to be paralyzed from the waist down to his feet. The reason for this special occasion was the Kareem McNeal Endowed Scholarship Fund, for students with disabilities. The Tuscaloosa City Council also named June 9 Kareem McNeal Day.

Seemingly reticent Kareem McNeal is a 28-year-old graduate of the University of Alabama. He received his undergraduate degree in human performance with a Masters in health education and promotions. McNeal worked for the RISE program for two years then came here to Shelton to be an instructor. Not only is McNeal the strength coach, but he also teaches weight training and personal health.

The gala was an evening filled with special guests and celebrities. The first of the featured guest, to walk in were Alabama Athletic Director Mal Moore, and assistant aide at the Bryant Museum, Coach Clem Gyska. Moore played football for Alabama and both coached Alabama football. Moore mentioned in his tribute that he recruited McNeal. Moore would attend McNeal's high school football and basketball games, but what was so impressive was what his teachers, friends, and family said about him. "He gets a lot of his personality and character from his mom," Moore stated.

Another of the celebrity guests was Gene Stallings. Stallings once again flew in from Texas in support of McNeal. Why once again? Well, when McNeal had his accident in July of '95, Stallings flew into Birmingham to see about McNeal.

When asked what he was thinking on his way to see about the accident Stallings said, "I didn't know what to think. I knew something was bad, but I didn't know just how bad until I talked to the doctors. McNeal had a chance for recovery, but it was a very slim chance. He did everything to make it work, not saying it won't work from this point on. He just didn't walk away like we wanted him to." According to Stallings, McNeal, his wife Rene, and his mother thought that he would walk again. "You always want to hold out for hope," said Stallings. Stallings also said, "If it wasn't for Kareem McNeal I wouldn't have been here. McNeal is a very courageous young man

Heaven Sent By RLS keeps a candle lit—for mom

By Jenny Tucker

Heaven Sent by RLS is more than a small shop one mile down Old Greensboro Road from the Shelton campus that sells scented candles.

It is a family-owned store that was established by three sisters in loving memory of their mother. In January of 1998 two of the sisters, Rhonda Hodges and Steciney Grimsley, were in a tragic car accident that took their mother's life. In addition to the death of their mother, Hodges was rendered helpless by a broken sternum.

Since Hodges could barely move from her injuries, she was confined to her bed for several months. One day as Hodges

Back to School

By Carol Y. Collins-Miller

Returning to school after more than 20 years was no easy task. However, after facing the harsh reality that a college education will likely offer better job opportunities my decision was made; I was going back to school.

Looking back I am reminded of the movie Back to School starring Rodney Dangerfield. I was about the age of the instructors, surrounded by student the age of my own children. In fact, I had two daughters attending at the time.

I stood there out of breath after climbing the stairs to the second floor. The halls were filled with these energetic, happy young people. "I should have finished college a long time ago," I thought to myself. Is it possible for me to get a college education after so much time away from the books? All sorts of negative thoughts rushed my mind and, unlike Mr. Dangerfield, neither fame nor fortune was on my side.

I walked into my math class. I found a seat in the center of the room. From this point the instructor looked small but the math problem on the blackboard behind her looked huge. "Let's begin with the order of operation," she said. Out of the entire room I felt I was the only one confused. I had no clue as to what the order of operation was. By the end of that class I felt certain I wouldn't be back. I just wasn't ready for math, "yet." Suddenly returning back to school seemed like not such a great idea but I couldn't quit.

Recently I read a book titled 100 Best Careers for the 21st Century by Shelly Field. It lists the qualification for 100 top paying jobs. Over 90 percent require a college degree or some college certification. Some Shelton students were asked why they thought a college degree is important. "Money" was the popular response. While I tend to agree, Fred Pryor co-author of "Who's not working and Why" offers another theory to consider. "If someone has the where-withal to finish college, even if they don't have any more real skills, some employers might figure that they are simply better workers."

So after my daughter reminded me to Please, Excuse, My, Dear, Aunt, Sarah, the order of operation became clearer. I met a few other students my age and I started to fit in. I began to enjoy the experience. Maybe not quite as much as Rodney Dangerfield but who knows what the future holds.

Nevertheless, I still believe it would have been much easier had I completed my college education when I was younger.

"Keep Looking Up!"

By Dr. Lee Albritton

Mars-the Red Planet

Have you noticed the bright red object coming up in the east as the Sun is setting? It is the fourth planet of the Solar System—Mars—and we will have excellent observing of it all summer!

On June 13, Mars was in a configuration referred to as opposition, which means that it was exactly opposite the Sun from our view on Earth. In other words, as the Sun is setting in the west, Mars is rising on the eastern horizon. This also means that Mars will be in the sky all night and will not set until morning.

Mars is slightly smaller than Earth, and its crust formed early in its history trapping a lot of the element iron on its surface. This iron combined with oxygen to form ferric oxide (rust), and this is what gives Mars its red color! The red color of Mars reminded the ancients of blood, and they named the planet after their god of war: Mars! Mars's symbol is a circle with a small arrow and represents the shield and spear that soldiers used in ancient times.

Mars is located to the left of a very familiar constellation, Scorpius. You can locate the scorpion's head, long body, curved tail, and forked stinger quite easily. You will find a bright red star in the scorpion, not as bright as Mars, and since it is a star, it twinkles. This star is named Antares which means "rival of Mars" because it has a reddish color like Mars.

Keep looking up, get outside on our nice summer nights, and enjoy a truly spectacular sight, Mars beside Scorpius!

Joe Namath and Steadman Shealy were also among the Bama celebrities. Namath played for Alabama in the early '60s then was drafted to the AFL to play for the New York Jets. Namath started off his tribute with a quote from Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, "Surround yourself with good people, and you will become a great person." Namath is thankful for his long-lasting relationship with the people of Alabama. Shealy, who was quarterback for Alabama during the consecutive '78-'79 national championship teams, also attended the gala. Both Namath and jersey. Several of the guys agreed, they all are part of a family, and that is what brought them all together.

President Rogers of Shelton State was excited to have these legends at his school. Rogers said, "We have a goal in becoming one of the top 25 two-year colleges. Anytime we can host an event of this magnitude, that involves personalities like this, validates what we are doing in the community." But no one expressed the idea of the evening better than Shelton's Milady Murphy, co-worker with McNeal and gala chairperson. "McNeal has the heart of a lion, and the spirit of an Angel. He never gives up, or lets his condition get in the way."

When asked what motivated him to start teaching McNeal said, "I didn't want life to pass me by. I had a decision to give up or keep going. There is a lot of life to live and you have to get up and do it. If I can encourage people to do the same thing, that is great." McNeal enjoys teaching at Shelton, and wants to help the athletes win. He is here to motivate the students of Shelton State.

Murphy said, "The gala was a success. The scholarship was a great idea by Dr. Rogers, to encourage students with disabilities to attend Shelton State. The reason for such a success was because of the gala committee. They expressed great team effort, which produced a great team."

Additional guests and celebrities include former Dallas Cowboy scout Bobby Marks, who teaches weight training at Shelton—and Kelvin Moore, Rory Seagars, and Harry Lee, all of whom played at Alabama. Dabo Swinney, a former coach for the Crimson Tide, Tommy Brooker, President of the "A" Club and Mitch Strickland. Strickland is a former graduate of Shelton State and a gold medallist Olympian in the wheelchair Paralympics.

Everyone there paid a tribute to McNeal, but no one captured the sentiment of the evening like Stallings. Even though McNeal did not play his senior year, Stallings mentioned a specific game, when Alabama was down a few points and there were no time outs left. It was half-time and McNeal walked into the locker room with assistance. It was an eventually change her life. This is how the idea for the scented candles was born. The thought was then passed on to her two sisters, and eventually turned into a business venture.

The sisters took a step of faith, spending over $600 to buy candle materials to get their business started. Heaven Sent was then established in a small kitchen, where the three sisters began selling homemade scented candles. Since then Hodges has recovered, as her daughter Heather Bailey says, "200 percent."

When asked how the business was doing Hodges reported "It is doing better than I had ever expected." In addition to selling candles in their shop, they also travel to different shows across Alabama and Mississippi every weekend. They travel to places like the World's Catfish Festival in, where they gain out-of-state customers who order candles by mail.

In attempt to keep their mother's memory alive, the sisters opened up the small candles shop naming it Heaven Sent.

Many believe that because they sell scented candles. When asked about this ambiguity, Grimsley said the name was meant more to honor their mother than to describe the smell of candles. Lisa Goodwin, Hodges, and Grimsley believe their mother would be greatly pleased with their thriving business. Hodges says that her mother "shines on in every candle that is lit."

The new store opened in 2001 as a living memorial to their mother. The store is named after its owners Rhonda, Lisa, and Steciney, hence the name RLS. This small two-room shop is built on big dreams. Many customers who visit the family business feel that because of the friendly faces and the fragrant aroma that the small shop is truly "Heaven Sent."

Theatre Tuscaloosa takes us to Twain territory in Big River

Mark Twain's timeless classic sweeps down the mighty Mississippi when Theatre Tuscaloosa presents the family musical Big River: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn on the stage of the Bean-Brown Theatre. Performances are scheduled July 27 through Aug. 5.

With music and lyrics by country songwriter Roger Miller and a book adapted by William Hauptman, Big River is a brilliant theatrical celebration of Americana. Mark Twain penned The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn in 1883, telling the story of the irrepressible Huck who helps his friend Jim, a slave, escape to freedom at the mouth of the Ohio River. Their adventures along the way are hilarious, suspenseful and heartwarming.

Starring as Huck is Brad Williams. Williams last appeared at Theatre Tuscaloosa in Moon Over Buffalo and was most recently seen in Ah, Wilderness, Last Night of Ballyhoo, The Rocky Horror Show at UA. Stephen T. Williams, who plays Jim, was seen in Plaza Suite and Amahl and the Night Visitors for Theatre Tuscaloosa.

Other cast members are Kyle Everett (Tom Sawyer), Cheryl Connelly (Widow Douglas), Charles Prosser (The King), Greg Hagler (The Duke) and Glen Johnson (Pap Finn). Also featured in the cast are Patti Miller, Christina Hammock,

Jonathan Michaelson, Associate Dean in the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Alabama, will direct the production. Among other shows, Michaelson has directed Moon Over Buffalo, The Gifts of the Magi and The Glass Menagerie for Theatre Tuscaloosa as well as numerous productions for UA Theatre. Musical director for the production is Chris Gordon. Scenic designs by Jesse Tilton, costume design by Jeanette

Robertson and lighting design by Charlie Dennis. Amanda Sullivan is stage manager for the production.

Big River performances begin on Friday, July 27, at 7:30 p.m., with additional performances on July 28 at 7:30 p.m., July 29 at 2 p.m., August 1 at 2 p.m., August 2-4 at 7:30 p.m. and August 5 at 2 p.m. Performances will be presented at the Bean-Brown Theatre on the campus of Shelton State Community College, 9500 Old Greensboro Road in Tuscaloosa.

Ticket prices are $15 adults, $12 seniors and $8 students and may be purchased by calling the Theatre Tuscaloosa box office at 205-391-2277.

—The Buccaneers are Here to Play—

Golf team plays great but takes third in national tourney

By Joe DeLoach

Even with last year's disappointing third place finish, Coach Matt Terry was more than pleased with third this year. The national tournament was held at the Texas A&M University course and at Pebble Creek Country Club in Tyler, Texas the week of May 28-June 1, 2001.

In 1999 the Shelton State golf team was the national champion. In 2000 Coach Terry took over as head coach of the stacked team that was returning from the championship season. Unfortunately the team didn't play up to its potential. This resulted in a very displeased coach.

This year was a different story for the golf team. Thanks to the patient and stellar play of some highly talented freshmen this team came home with a strong third. "When my boys became patient this year and let their games come to them, things went great," said Terry.

By the time the tournament had come around, Coach Terry was very excited because the play of his four tournament players had really come around. On the first day Shelton State posted a very strong score of 294 that would normally put them in contention for the lead, but the Temple team put up an amazing 270 that put them on top of the leaderboard. Unfortunately for the Bucs, the leaderboard stayed the same and ended them with a very proud third in the tournament.

Out of the four players, who went to nationals, making the difference were three freshmen all-Americans: Pope Spruiell, Calle Andren, and Will Taylor. Along with these three, was sophomore Thad Holcombe.

This team shot a total score of 1170, five strokes better than the 1999 championship team. Pope Spruiell shot even par for the tournament with scores of 72, 73, 71, 72, which placed him fourth overall in the tournament. Calle Andren and Will Taylor shot a four-day total of 293, which placed them tied for 11th place overall. "We played great, but the Temple team was just that much stronger," commented Terry.

Even with the exceptional play of the team this year Coach Terry also had something else to be proud of, their grades. They posted an amazing accumulative G.P.A. of 3.29. As every college student knows, it is difficult to maintain grades while being active in other extra-curricular activities—especially one such as a golf which is so mentally taxing.

Along with the three returning all-Americans, Coach Terry is expecting some outstanding new prospects. With the things are coming together for the next year, there is nothing but high hopes for Buc's golf team. Terry said, "If we continue to work hard we can definitely bring home the big trophy next year."

Container gardening brings nature to the darndest places

By James Embrey

You wake up in the morning, to the smell of stale beer and cigarettes. The pizza boxes, cans, and other trash cover every surface, some in stacks taller than a person. Underneath the prevailing stench of the room, the faint scent of flowers in bloom drifts through an open window. On the porch a large palm tree shades an empty keg, while someone sleeps using a fern for a pillow.

Allison Gary, a student from Tuscaloosa says, "My flower pot outside my apartment livens up my entry way, distinguishes my apartment from the others, and makes me happy when I come home."

Serving as an air freshener or pillow, are some uses for plants, but they can also bring color and life into your home. Plants of any type are a great addition to a student's house or apartment. Many students living in Tuscaloosa's older homes are able to enjoy remnants of the beautiful gardens, from when these homes were privately owned. Whether you live in a house or apartment, container gardening is an easy way, to add a little green to your surroundings. Container gardening can be done by anyone, on any budget. Everything you need can be found at Wal-Mart, Home Depot,

"Are you hungry, dear,?" my girlfriend asks.

"Starving,," I say, "What's cookin', good lookin'?"

She turns around and chuckles. "Oh, I'm sorry, are you hungry? I was talking to Mr. Fluff."

"Of course." I thought. "It's time for his fifth meal of the day." Mr. Fluff, her fat, spoiled pet looks just like the cat on the Fancy Feast commercials, except he indulges in much finer dining.

The foul thing is a menace--just one brush of its tail and my freshly dry-cleaned black pants are covered in long, white fur. Not only is Mr. Fluff messy, the little furball prances around the apartment like he owns the place. He may as well; he gets more respect than I do.

"Why do you pamper this beast,?" I ask her. "It's as old as I am, and when you're baby talking him, all he understands is "Blah, blah, blah, Mr. Fluff, blah, blah."

or any supply garden store.

"Container gardening is increasing in popularity, due to the easiness of getting started, minimum maintenance requirements, and the adaptability to any area or environment," says Chris Collins, an employee of Gardens on Main, in downtown Northport. Any object that will hold dirt and allow water to drain is suitable for uses as a planting container. The cheapest and easiest container to purchase is a simple flowerpot. Hanging baskets and window boxes are other choices for planting inside or outside of your living area. All of these are available in many sizes, styles, and materials. Window boxes and hanging baskets may need to be lined with coconut rye or sheet

"Mr. Fluff has special needs," she says. "Be a little more sensitive," she says.

I am sensitive, indeed; sensitive to the fact that Mr. Fluff eats more of my food than I do. He even drinks my wine and staggers around the place, marking his territory. Hey, I understand, I just live here.

Did I mention he's a thief? Believe it! The greedy home wrecker had the audacity to steal my wallet. It was then that I knew what I was dealing with. This was no ordinary feline. There was no other explanation: Mr. Fluff was the devil in disguise. Such nerve! I did manage to retrieve most of my belongings--what was left of them anyway. However, my cash was never recovered.

I had completely underestimated Fluff's ca-capacity for destruction. I'll bet that sneaky demon smokes my cigarettes when I'm not looking. And only God knows what he did with my $20.

Gulf Shores: Where the summer living is easy—and the pay is great

By Jeremy Bourgeois

"Help," "Help Needed," and "Now Hiring" are what's being seen on the signs in the windows of businesses all across the beach in Gulf Shores. It is possible to live at the beach for the summer, have no problem finding a good paying job, work where you choose, and actually save more money than if you were to stay in Tuscaloosa. And with the summer just beginning it's not too late! Nick Kaiser, a Foley resident said, "Since the jobs in Tuscaloosa are scarce and pay less, I chose to stay in Foley and work in Gulf Shores for one more summer before coming to the University of Alabama."

Many students who grew up at the beach left to go to school and still return every summer in order to work and save money. In Gulf Shores, businesses pay an average of 50 percent more per day than in Tuscaloosa. This is because of the lack of permanent residents and the need for so much more help during summer months. Tuscaloosa has many applicants, and this allows businesses here to pay most job seekers $5.15 or minimum wage, as a starting salary. There is also usually a two-week waiting period for your application to be reviewed in Tuscaloosa. This discourages some people, at the beach they sometimes tell you to "get to work" right after the interview. This tactic of "go ahead and get to work" could easily put another few paychecks in your bank account.

Cory Davis, a student at Alabama, reported making between $85-$100 a day setting up beach chairs. He just set them up in the morning and adjusted the umbrellas throughout the day, and then put the chairs back at dusk. Of course he couldn't put up beach chairs in Tuscaloosa, so he's working at Outback Steakhouse where he says he averages between $30-$60 per shift.

The expenses at the beach, although higher, are made up for with the wage increase you sustain just coming onto the island. Gas prices are about twenty-five cents higher, and of course you will pay more for rent to live on the beach. But you can move to Foley, approximately twelve to fifteen miles north of the island, and live in a two bedroom two bath home for $600 per month, which is basically what you would pay for the same house here in town.

So even if it's not this summer, maybe you should consider a few months of working, saving a little money, and of course, fun in the sun during your time off from school in Gulf Shores next summer—or this.

peat moss (easily found in any garden center) to hold dirt in. Containers made of clay should be submerged in water for twenty-four hours before planting in them. You should never use plastic liners in your container.

Once you have selected and prepared your container, you need enough soil to fill it. A five-gallon bucket or similar container is also needed. A 50 percent, organic matter, 25 percent sand, 25 percent peat moss mixture makes a planting base, but any potting soil will do. Some have fertilizer added. If not any fertilizer can be used, just make sure it is designed for the type of plants you choose. A triple-13, 13-13-13; time released fertilizer, like Osmocote is a good choice. Simply follow application instructions.

Fill your five-gallon bucket half-way with your potting soil mix. Add water to soil and blend. You want the soil to be wet and sticky but not muddy and soupy. Fill container with dirt from bucket. Repeat until soil is 2"-3" from top of container. If planting large plants, fill container so that a plant set in container is 2"-3" from top. Fill remaining are around plant with soil and pack lightly.

When your container is ready, select plants you like and fill it. Impatiens are a good choice for shade. Vinca is a good choice for sun. Herbs are also another option. They should be planted where full sun is available. There are as many choices of plants available as there are containers. If planting multiple species in the same container, choose plants with similar likes and dislikes, such as lighting, watering, and growing times. Light and water are essential for plants to survive. Some plants require more sun, some require more shade, some require equal amounts of both. Choose plants that will be best suited for where you want your container. Growing plants in a container is an easy way to brighten your residence, and impress your friends.
